Chapter 1

{bach} n. Shot. v. Shoot. KGT 56: “The verb used for shoot when referring to disruptors is {bach}. Technically speaking, one shoots the energy beam from the disruptor. The general word for any energy beam (“ray”) is {tIH}, so a disruptor’s beam is {nISwI' tIH}. Thus, the correct formation is {nISwI' tIH bach} (“shoot the disruptor beam”). As a practical matter, however, the {tIH} is often left out, and {nISwI' bach} is the common way to say “shoot a disruptor”. Similarly, {pu' bach} is “shoot a phaser.”” Canon: ST3: {bach Do', qaH} A lucky shot sir... ST5 NOTES: {logh veQDaq bachchugh, yoH 'e' toblaHbe' SuvwI'} Shooting space garbage is no test of a warrior’s mettle. Cf. {baH} Found: TKD, TKW, KGT

{bachHa'} v. slang. 1. Err. 2. Make a mistake. charghwI': “Note that this is obviously not a noun. I’m convinced that he made this mistake on purpose, given the definition. It sets the tone for the degree of perfection we are to expect from this work. He knows there will be errors, so why wait. Put one in the first entry.” Canon: KGT: {jIbachHa'pu'} I have made a mistake (slang: “I have mis-shot”) KGT 20: {bIQ ngaS HIvje'} The cup contains water - “This idiomatic expression means “be quick mistaken, be totally wrong.”” Pun: “botch” Cf. {Qach}, {muj}, {lughbe'}, {qarbe'} Found: KGT

{bagh} v. (to) Tie. Cf. {muv}, {rar}, {tay'} Found: TKDA

{baghneQ} n. Spoon. KGT 99: “Eating is done with hands only. There is no Klingon fork or spoon. If the cook has prepared the food properly, there should be no need to use a knife either, though, from time to time, one is quite useful.” st.k 5/05/98: “The Klingon word for “fork” is {puq chonnaQ}. As is well known, Klingons prefer to get food into their mouths without the aid of implements (except for such things as the bowl containing soup or the goblet containing bloodwine). Nevertheless, they have become acquainted with the eating habits of other cultures and have become aware of such things as forks. On occasion, they’ll even use the implements, most commonly when partaking of a non-Klingon meal (whether on a Klingon planet or elsewhere) but sometimes when eating Klingon food, as if to add an exotic touch to the meal experience. (Not all Klingons are skilled in using forks, however, and some simply refuse to deal with them. Those who do not use them seem to be not at all troubled by eating “foreign” food using Klingon means – that is, hands.) ... The Klingon word for “spoon” is {baghneQ}. Even though spoons were never typically used when eating, the word appears to have been in the language for a long time, suggesting that it may once have meant something else. One theory is that it comes from {nagh beQ} “flat stone, flat rock” and that the initial sounds of the two words, n and b, were, for some reason, transposed. This is, however, just speculation.” Pun: “a spoonerism” Cf. {bo'Dagh} Found: ST.K

{baH} v. Fire (torpedo, rocket, missile.) KGT 56: “Ships are also equipped with an explosive weapon called a peng, usually translated as “torpedo”, though “missile” might work just as well... The verb used for “launch” or “fire” a weapon of this type is {baH}, and there is even a special word, {ghuS}, meaning prepare to launch.” KGT 56: “The verb used for shoot when referring to disruptors is {bach} ... the correct formation is {nISwI' tIH bach} (shoot the disruptor beam) ... however, the {tIH} is often left out, and {nISwI' bach} is the common way to say “shoot a disruptor”.” M.Ok. BBS 2/98: “This was one of the eleven original Klingon words created by James Doohan and spoken by Mark Lenard (through a set of prosthetic teeth) in the opening scene of STMP in which Marc Okrand used as the basis for {tlhIngan Hol}. {baH} for “Fire!” was clipped and, in Lenard's character's dialect, pronounced “{maH}” (as mentioned in TKD). “(Having said that, the command meaning ‘Fire [a torpedo]!’ - which I transcribed as “{baH}” but which also sounds kind of like “maH” - must have always had that meaning, since it's there a couple of times. [The H is pronounced like the final ch in the name of the composer Bach.]” (G. Proechel) STMP: “Doohan, who knows some Russian MUST have gotten this from Russian. In Russian BAX pronounced /baH/ means BANG! as in a gun shot. I can't help but believe that this was deliberate on the part of Doohan, despite protestations by the Philistines.” Canon: CK: {baH} Fire! TKD: {baHchu'} He fire (the torpedo) perfectly. TKD: {cha yIbaH qara'DI' or qara'DI' cha yIbaH} Fire the torpedoes at my command. TKD: {yIbaH!} Fire (the torpedoes)! KGT: {yIbaH!} Fire (the torpedo)! ST6: {Qo'noS wa'Daq baHta' ['entepray']} Enterprise fired on Kronos One... KBoP: {nISwI': cha' chang'engmey (telDaq lujomlu', nItebHa' lubaHlu')} Disruptor - 2 Pairs (Wing Mounted, Fire Linked) Cf. {bach}, {baHjan}, {baHwI'}, {chuH}, {laQ}, {vo'} Found: TKD, KGT, KBoP

{baHjan} n. Launcher. Canon: BoP: {peng baHjan} Torpedo launcher. BoP: {otlh peng baHjan} Photon torpedo launcher. Found: BoP {baHwI'} n. Gunner. TKD 20: “...which consists of the v {baH} fire (a torpedo) plus {-wI'} one who does. Thus, {baHwI'} is literally “one who fires [a torpedo]”. Canon: TKD: {baHwI'pu'vam} These gunners ST3: {baHwI', DoS yUbuS. QuQ neH. yaj'a'} Gunner: Target engine only. Understood? TDP: {po'neS baHwI'pu'II'} Gunner, stand ready. TDP: {baHwI', 'ejyo'waw' DoS} Target the starbase, gunner. Cf. {matha'} Found: TKD

{baj} v. 1. (Actively) work for. 2. Garner. 3. Earn. 3. KGT 69: “Though any perceived attack on one's honor may prompt one to issue a challenge, in one traditional form of duel, the goal is specifically for a man to “win the favor of a woman” (vuv be' 'e' baj [literally, “earn that a woman respect him”]) by competing with another man.” Canon: TKW: {yInlu'taH 'e' bajnISlu'} Survival must be earned. TKW: {yay chavlu' 'e' bajnISlu'} Victory must be earned. Found: TKW, KGT

{bal} n. 1. Jug. 2. Jar. 3. Bottle. KGT 98: “A container from which drinks are consumed is a {Hivje'}. This word is used for any sort of drinking vessel: glass, cup, mug, stein, gob-

let, tumbler, and so on. [...] A {bal} is any bottle or jug used to store liquid. Usually one will pour ({qang}) the drink directly from the {bal} into the {Hivje'}, but it is not considered uncivil to drink directly from the {bal}. Ale [{wornagh}] is often stored in a large vat ({qegh}) rather than in a {bal} Some drinks are served in special containers, such as the {runpI'} (teapot) used in the making of {Dargh} (tea), and are then poured into the appropriate {Hivje'}.” KGT 97: “a cook's ever-present supply of {chanDoq} (marinade) is kept in a large {bal}” KCD: “A {bIQ bal} (water jug) is “traditionally kept filled and set at the front door of every warrior home. It is said, when a warrior returns from battle, he thirsts, and should not want for satisfaction.” Found: KGT

{loS n, num, v.} n. Fourth tone of nonatonic musical scale. num. 1. 2. Four. v. -3. Wait (for). KGT 72: "Older Klingon music was based on a nonatonic scale—that is, one made up of nine tones. Each tone has a specific name, comparable to the "do, re, mi" system used in describing music on Earth. The nine tone names are (the first and ninth, as with Earth's "do," being the same): {yu} {bIm}, {'egh}, {loS}, {vagh}, {jav}, {Soch}, {chorgh}, {yu}. While the first three (and ninth) of these words apparently are used only for singing the scale, the remaining five are also numerals: {loS}, "four"; {vagh}, "five"; {jav}, "six"; {Soch}, "seven"; {chorgh}, "eight." It is possible that, at some time in the past, the numerals were "borrowed" into the lexicon of music in order to sing the scale but, for some reason, the first three (presumably {wa'}, {cha'}, {wej} ["one, two, three"]) were either changed or never used. It is far more likely, however, that the borrowing went in the other direction. As is well documented, the Klingon counting system was originally a ternary system (one based on three, with numbers higher than three formed from the words for "one," "two," and "three"). Later, owing to outside influences, it changed to a decimal system (based on ten). The independent words for the numbers three through nine were not originally a part of the Klingon counting system, but they had to come from somewhere. The musical scale is the likely source. The word for the fourth musical tone, {loS}, began to be used for the number four, and so on through the eighth tone, {chorgh}. (The origins of the words {Hut} "nine" and the suffix {-maH}, used in the words for "ten," "twenty," "thirty," and so on, are obscure.) Found: TKD

{nargh} v. 1. Appear. 2. Escape.
KGT: “According to mythology, when a dishonored Klingon dies, his or her spirit goes to a place called Gre’thor, there to remain. To speak of spirits escaping from Gre’thor is to speak of an impossibility. The phrase usually follows the statement of what it is that supposedly cannot happen: {jIjegh ghe’torvo’ narghDI’ qa’pu’} I will surrender when spirits escape from Gre’thor.”¹¹⁷ TKW: “In Klingon, opportunities are captured ({jon}), not taken; a missed opportunity is said to have escaped ({nargh}).”⁵¹ TKW: “The verb {nargh} ... means “escape”, but the same word, or a phonetically identical one, means “appear”. Thus, perhaps the Klingons are saying that when a warrior dies, his spirit appears, whereas prior to death it was hidden or disguised by the body. Another interpretation is that the spirit was held prisoner by the body. Worf told Jeremy, whose mother had been killed, “In my tradition, we do not grieve the loss of the body. We celebrate the releasing of the spirt.”¹⁴⁵ st.k 1/98: “I’d probably take an idiomatic approach incorporating the phrase {nargh 'eb} “the opportunity escapes” ... This goes along with other expressions such as {'eb jon} “he/she captures the opportunity” or, more colloquially “he/she seizes the opportunity.” Canon: KLS: {jInargh} I escape. {narghta'}[They have] Escaped. {taj Dopmeyer-Daq nargh cha' tajHom}Two small, secondary blades eject from the knife’s sides. {narghbe'chugh SuvwI' qa' taH may'}If the warrior’s spirit has not escaped, the battle is still going on. {HeghDI' SuvwI' nargh SuvwI' qa'}When a warrior dies, his spirit escapes. {'avwI' nejDI' narghta'bogh qama' reH 'avwI' Sambej}When an escaped prisoner looks for a guard, he always finds one. {ghe'torvo' narghDI' qa'pu'}When spirits escape from Gre’thor. {jIpaSqu'mo' narghpu' qaSuchmeH 'eb}I was too late to visit you. KGT: "Within the family, a child usually addresses his or her mother as SoS (Mother) and father as vav (Father), though it is not uncommon for younger children to use the words SoSoy (Mommy) and {vavoy} (Daddy). These are the regular words for "mother" and "father" followed by the suffix {-oy}, which indicates endearment. Most older children drop the {-oy} around the time of their Age of Ascension, though some continue to use it even after that, especially when addressing the parent of the opposite sex [...] Though almost always heard as terms of direct address (as in {Sosoy jIghung} ["Mommy, I'm hungry"]), kinship terms with the suffix {-oy} are occasionally used as subjects or objects of sentences, particularly in the speech of younger children. For example, a proud child may say, {SuvwI' ghaH vavoy'e'} ("My daddy is a warrior")." 198-99 Canon: PK: {Hab SoSI' Quch} Your mother has a smooth forehead!!

{yIv} v. 1. Chew. 2. Annoy, bother, irk, irritate. (slang) KGT: "This verb literally means "chew". In its slang sense, it is found in such constructions as {choyIv} ("You bother me"—literally, "You chew me") or {muyIv romuluS Ha'DIbaH} ("The Romulan dog irks me"; literally, "The Romulan animal chews me", where "Romulan animal" is a derogatory way to refer to a Romulan). The subject of {yIv} can be only a person or creature, not an inanimate object or a situation. Thus, it is inappropriate to say something like {muyIv 'Iw HIq bIr} ("cold bloodwine chews me"). Standard ways to express the same idea are {nuQ} ("annoy, bother") and {berghmoH} ("irritate")." 167 Canon: PK: {DeSvetlh yIv} Chew that arm! {to'waQ yIyIv!} Chew ligament! {'avwI'} n. Guard. PK: "{ 'avwI'pu' } may be the Klingon version of police and border patrol - they interrogate the Terran tourist at the spaceport and they patrol the streets in PK. A slang term for { 'avwI' } (and perhaps other bothersome officials) appears to be { ghew } (lit. "bug, insect"). In ST6 Kesla tells Uhura, whom he thinks is a smuggler, { ghewmey SuqQo'! } "Don't catch any bugs!" address in general and doesn't actually have the implication of deference or reverence that I inferred. If it hadn't been consistently present when the opera "speaks to" Kahless, and consistently absent when it "speaks to" Molor, I might have ignored it as an unimportant background sound. English has almost exactly the same sound with pretty much the same meaning: "O Mouse, do you know the way out of this pool? I am very tired of swimming about here, O Mouse!"
